

Bush warns Iraq against interfering with inspectors

Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) — After a day of trying to quell talk of a renewed war with Iraq, President Bush issued new warnings to Saddam Hussein and new reassurances to the American public.

Saddam, Bush used an interview with Hispanic journalists in Los Angeles on Thursday to say, "I've been more determined" about preventing interference with the helicopters of U.N. weapons inspectors. "I should not miscalculate again."

Americans, Bush said he was warning "Son of Desert Storm," would rely on air power if necessary to allay the concerns of America, I would simply say we're not talking about massive troop movements. ... We are talking about, if necessary, is accompanying helicopters as an air power. And we've got a fair power there," he said.

President's remarks reversed a course of a day in which Bush had raised questions about his ultimatum to Saddam the day before.

At one point, Bush was told that state-run news media had accused the United States of "spreading information ... to justify its aggression," and replied, "I'm not looking for a fight with anyone." Before the president's Los Angeles interview, the Pentagon said, "No one is going anywhere."

A Defense Department spokesman said Williams refused to comment on the status of any U.S. forces, and the Pentagon doesn't comment on contingency plans.

Williams added, "No orders have been issued to carry out any plan with respect to an Iraqi contingency. ... All I can say is, there are no troops moving. Nobody is going anywhere."

He did say that U.S. Patriot missiles will be leaving bases in Europe soon for Saudi Arabia.

Williams said there was "no increased threat" that sparked their move.

The antimissile weapons were requested by King Fahd because the Saudis "feel threatened" by Iraq since Baghdad "continues to try to sidestep the U.N. Security Council resolutions on destroying their ballistic missiles," Williams said.

He said Iraq "has a long way to go" to meet U.N. demands for disclosing the full range of its nuclear, chemical and biological weapons programs, as well as its ballistic missiles.

A team of 13 U.N. inspectors planned to go to Iraq Friday to carry on the search for biological weapons and a group of nuclear experts was ready to go over the weekend, officials said.

Members of the U.N. Special Committee declined to give any details of either of the trips, citing heightened tensions.

"This is a deterrent to make it clear to your friends and to the Iraqis that the United States is prepared to do whatever is necessary to defend its interests and the interests of its allies in the region," Williams said.

A Patriot missile unit is composed of 95 soldiers, but Williams did not say how many people would be going to Saudi Arabia.

Nor would he say how many missiles will be sent to Saudi Arabia, when they are scheduled to depart, or how long they will remain there.

Baker urges Palestinians to join Middle East peace conference

Associated Press

AMMAN, Jordan — Secretary of State James A. Baker III and King Hussein on Thursday jointly urged the Palestinians to attend a Mideast peace conference, saying they have the most to lose by not seizing an opportunity that the Jordanian leader said "may not come again, ever."

Baker said the United States was prepared to go ahead with the conference regardless of Palestinian participation. Hussein, whose populace is about half Palestinian, declined to say whether Jordan would do so — calling the question premature — but declared "the time has come for people to act."

"We would be prepared to sponsor a conference that could proceed toward peace across the board," said Baker when asked at a joint news conference with the king whether the United States would go ahead if the Palestinians refused to attend.

Jordan was the third Arab country visited by Baker on a trip designed to firm up arrangements for the peace conference the United States hopes to convene in October. He also met with three Palestinians in Jerusalem on Monday immediately after conferring with Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir.

The secretary of state plans to fly to Damascus, Syria, on Friday for a second meeting with President Hafez Assad. He met Tuesday with Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak. At each stop Baker has circulated letters in which the United States lays out positions on a range of issues related to the peace process. For example, the letter to the Israelis said they would not be required to sit at the negotiating table with any delegation of which they disapproved.

That proviso effectively recognized an Israeli claim to veto power over any Palestinian delegation that contained members of the Palestine Liberation Organization or residents of East Jerusalem.

On the other hand, the letter to Assad reaffirmed U.S. support of Syria's demand for return of the Golan Heights, occupied by Israel since the 1967 Arab-Israeli war.

In response to a report that the Palestinians he met with in Jerusalem had refused under PLO pressure to meet with him again in Amman, Baker said, "I would very much like to meet with the Palestinians we've been meeting with in Jerusalem, here or anywhere else."

The Palestine National Council is scheduled to meet in Algiers on Monday, and there are conflicting reports as to whether the Palestinian legislative body will endorse sending representatives to the peace conference as part of a Jordanian delegation.

Baker and Hussein appeared determined to send a strong message to the PLO not to torpedo efforts to bring Palestinians to the table.

"I hope they all realize time is short," said Hussein. "The opportunity may not come again, ever."

Hussein said the alternative to a peace conference "is disaster."

Baker used similar language. "I believe this is the best opportunity that has presented itself in a long, long time," he said.

James Baker III, left, is escorted by Israeli Foreign Minister David Levy on his arrival to Tel Aviv last week.

Senate bill could give $30 million to Utah military

DIKKI K. CARLSON
Universe Staff Writer

While many parts of the United States are feeling the economic impact of military cutbacks, the federal military appropriations bill passed last week by the U.S. Senate could give Utah over $30 million for state military projects.

The Senate bill must now be reconciled with a bill the U.S. House of Representatives passed and then sent to the president.

The Senate bill would appropriate $30 million to build a new army maintenance shop in Spanish Fork. The new facility would consolidate several smaller, older buildings, some facilities, scattered throughout Utah County, are out of date, too small and unsafe," said Sen. Jake Garn, R-Utah. "The electrical and plumbing systems at one of the buildings do not even meet code for the state of Utah."

There's been on a waiting list since 1984," said Maj. Pete Wilson of the 1st Cavalry Army National Guard. Utah has already approved its $1.3 million for the project over its last two legislative sessions.

Utah receives the funding, the project will probably start taking shape in the project in March or April, Wilson said. He said the building would house a 53,000 square-foot armory and an 11,000 square-foot maintenance facility.

Wilson said the armory will be used for training three units of the National Guard: C-Company 1457th Engineer Battalion, 116th Engineer Co. CSE and C-Battery 140th Artillery.

The appropriations bill also would allot $4.25 million for a new maintenance facility for the 388th Tactical Fighter Wing stationed at Hill Air Force Base. The unit now uses a building built for the upcoming Minuteman Missile project.

"This new facility will help maintain the proficiency of the 388th, and will ensure that it will continue to be a vital part of our armed forces," Garn said.

The building will be used for weapons assembly, inspection and testing of weapons.

In a last-minute amendment to the appropriations bill, Garn called attention to the Army's alleged neglect of the part of Fort Douglas which is scheduled to be transferred to the University of Utah in November.

Power outage sparks computer problems

LANCE D. MADIGAN
Universe Staff Writer

At about 11:15 Thursday morning, a general power failure struck much of the Wasatch Front. Authorities from Utah Power and Light Company said the Hael substation went down, cutting off the power feeding the northern half of Provo.

Brent Davis, a manager for the Utah Power Technical Operations and Engineering Department, said Provo has two entries for power into the city, one entering from the north and another from the south. "When we lost the north line, the system de-energized and the relay separated. We were able to find the problem, and re-energize the system from the Tanner substation."

Most of the power in Provo was restored in about five minutes.

While power at BYU was only out for a short time, it still managed to cause some problems in several departments on campus.

Most areas with computers were plagued with lost data because the computers went down. Many people said they were slowed down but recovered fairly quickly.

But George Allred, program analyst for Administration and Records, said their main frame was having serious problems.

"With big computers like ours, the system has to be shut down in stages," Allred said. "When the power goes off in mid-stream while it is still running, it confuses it. When the power comes back up, we have problems."

Allred said power failures of this sort have happened three or four times in the last ten years he has been working for BYU. One time the problem created by the loss of power was so bad, the system was down for three days.

Executive Director of Computing Services, Kelly McDonald, said, "We had two systems that had problems. The first was the academic system in the Clyde Building, which basically runs the library. It was off for a total of two hours. And the second was the administration system. Students would mainly be exposed to that one through the Records Office or the advisement centers."

McDonald said this was an unusual power failure. "Normally, when the power fails, the system comes back up. This time, however, some components were actually damaged, and we had to have the computer companies come in and reset them."

But not all areas had so many difficulties. Sam Brooks, director of Food Services, said his department had few. "It wasn't really long enough for us to worry about. When the computerized cash registers went down, we had to do things by hand, but that only caused a little back up. Even with the electric grills, we just had to blink our eyes and they were back on."

The Health Center was also fortunate. Pharmacy Manager Jerry Graff said, "The center has an automatic back up generator, so we came right back up and went to work."

Gates knew of Contra affair, Senate told

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Robert Gates, the CIA insider nominated to direct the agency, was portrayed Thursday as a man "sort of on the make," who knew the outlines of Oliver North's secret program to supply the Nicaraguan rebels in the face of a congressional ban.

The third day of Gates' confirmation hearings before the Senate Intelligence Committee provided riveting insights into the shadows of CIA operations.

The lead witness was Alan Fiers, head of the CIA's Central American Task Force from 1984-86, who reopened a Pandora's box last summer by testifying that he had been one of a handful of CIA officials who knew about a bizarre program, directed by North in Ronald Reagan's White House, that diverted money from a covert sale of U.S. arms to Iran to support the Contras.

Fiers, who pleaded guilty to two misdemeanors for withholding information from Congress, said he informed two of his superiors about the diversion, which came at a time when Congress had banned U.S. aid to the rebels.

"I have serious reason to doubt Bob Gates had extensive knowledge" of White House involvement with the Contras, Fiers said, noting that Gates had become deputy CIA director in the since-deceased William Casey in April 1986, when the project was well underway.

"I think he got glimpses, snatches and insights into it, enough so he knew there was a problem, that there were shooals out there the agency should stay away from," Fiers added.

He described Gates as "very smart, very capable, sort of on the make," adding that people at the agency regarded him as "aloof."

John McMahon, Gates' predecessor as deputy CIA director, described him as "uniquely qualified" for the job of director.

In one statement, former CIA lawyer David Doherty told Senate investigators that he handed Gates a draft copy of a politically embarrassing presidential document a day or two before Casey testified to Congress on Nov. 21, 1986.

Gates has testified that he knew nothing about the document at the time he was overseeing the preparation of Casey's testimony. The document retroactively authorized the CIA's assistance in the November 1985 shipment of U.S. Hawk missiles from Israel to Iran.

Fiers said that for "Five years I have waited for this opportunity to speak publicly."

The committee granted him immunity for his testimony.

He added, it was "quite possible" Casey didn't confide in Gates what he knew about the Contra diversion because he wanted to limit the number of CIA people exposed to the illegal activity.

Environmental threats sink Utah in ranking of healthiest states

Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY — Utah would have tied with New Hampshire as having the third healthiest population in the country, but an insurance firm ranking the states said environmental hazards dropped Utah to No. 26.

Northwest National Life Insurance Co. annually publishes health rankings for the 50 states based on incidence of disease, number of smokers, access to health care and other factors. Utah was tied with Minnesota for first place last year.

The insurance company added environmental factors to the list for the first time in 1991, including air pollution, release of toxic chemicals and unsafe drinking water.

Northwest's Marsha Johnson, contacted by telephone in Minneapolis, said 80 percent of Utah's toxic-chemical emanations were found in Tooele County. The study said that is an "extremely high per capita release of toxic chemicals."

Magnesium Corporation of America, Magcorp, produces high concentrations of chlorine.

"It is hard to jump from three to 26 based on a facility that is already taking some action to reduce the emissions," F. Burnell Corder, director of the Utah Division of Air Quality, said Wednesday of Magcorp. "And they are a long way from the population centers."

Magcorp is 75 miles from any populated area and chlorine reacts rapidly in the atmosphere, converting to less harmful compounds, he said.

The data used by Northwest is dated, Corder said. In the past six to eight months, Magcorp has reduced its chlorine emissions by 40 percent.

The study also cited Utah's high percentage of people using water systems in violation of federal standards accounted for the drop in rank.

A spokesman for the Utah Department of Environmental Quality defended Utah's water quality, saying 92 percent of the users on the state's systems are protected by professionals who ensure the water quality. A "tiny percentage" of monitoring is done by volunteers who sometimes fail to report. When that happens, the computer records a "procedural violation."

Those procedural violations were counted in the study, he said, adding that Utah's water system is "considered one of the best systems in the world."

Legislative committee hears taped threat

SALT LAKE CITY — As the Legislature's Interim Judiciary Committee listened to recorded telephone messages left at the Mexican Civic Center in Salt Lake City, some members of the audience covered their faces and others wept.

The male caller, who identified himself as Mark, threatened the Hispanic community with vigilante action.

He claimed minorities alone are responsible for crime in Utah and have no redeemable qualities.

Robert Gallegos, president of the Mexican Civic Center, asked the committee considering a "hate crimes" bill to listen to the calls Wednesday so they could "hear the kinds of things people hear out on the street."

The legislation would make it a third-degree felony to destroy property, attack or threaten a person because of race, religion, ancestry, national origin, ethnic background or sexual orientation.

The sponsor, Rep. Frank Pignatelli, D-Salt Lake City, said he found it ironic Utah is one of only two states that have not passed such legislation.

Glen Cook, representing the Salt Lake chapter of the National Association for Advancement of Colored People, urged support of the bill.

He said the Legislature "should demonstrate to the nation that Utah cherishes diversity; Utah values personal dignity; Utah gives the highest priority to individual freedom."

'Slightly ill' Yeltsin cancels appearances

MOSCOW — Russian Federation President Boris Yeltsin was described as "slightly ill" from an unspecified heart ailment Thursday, and he canceled his engagements for a second straight day.

The acting chairman of the Russian legislature, Ruslan Khasbulatov, told lawmakers the 60-year-old Yeltsin could not speak to the opening session of the legislature as planned because his doctors told him to rest for a day.

He said Yeltsin was not seriously ill and still planned to visit Azerbaijan this weekend.

There was no public talk that Yeltsin might be seriously ill, and speculation grew in the legislature that he might be feigning illness to avoid a debate with lawmakers angry at this transfer of powers to the executive branch.

Yeltsin issued a series of sweeping decrees after the failed Aug. 18-21 coup, asserting his authority over many aspects of the central Soviet government and bypassing legislative review. Many lawmakers have questioned their legality.

Backward method reveals faulty gene

BOSTON — Scientists say they have for the first time discovered a normal gene, altered it and then found the cause of a mysterious human illness.

The technique, called reverse genetics, is the opposite of the way scientists ordinarily search for defective genes that underlie many disorders, especially those passed through families.

Typically, scientists start with a disease and try to find the gene that causes it.

In their backward approach, the researchers found that errors in genes that make a common protein called keratin are to blame for a rare skin disorder called epidermolysis bullosa simplex.

"A scientist is always reluctant to say they were the first to do anything, but I am fairly certain it's the first case" of discovering the cause of a disease this way, said Dr. Elaine Fuchs of the University of Chicago's Howard Hughes Medical Institute.

A report on her work was published in Friday's issue of the journal Cell. Fuch's work could lead to a cure for the disease. It is now untreatable and affects one in 50,000 people, she said.

Officials probing Am. Fork officer's death

AMERICAN FORK — Authorities are investigating the death of Larry F. Burnham, a 19-year veteran of the American Fork Police Department.

The 49-year-old lawman's body was found Tuesday by a Utah County Sheriff's Department canine unit in American Fork Canyon.

Police confirmed Burnham had taken vacation leave and had been involved in a domestic dispute Monday evening. Burnham was later confronted by a fellow officer who noticed Burnham was distressed.

The officer followed Burnham up through the canyon but lost him. Utah County Search and Rescue looked for Burnham and found his body early Tuesday morning.

"He was very well thought of by the department and the community," said Police Chief John Durrant. "He was dedicated to the people and he'll be sorely missed. He was a good cop."

Burnham, a native of Lehi, was approximately one year away from a 20-year retirement.

Kidnappers freeze release of hostages

BEIRUT, Lebanon — A pro-Iranian kidnapping faction said Thursday it would not free any Western hostages until Israel releases 20 more Lebanese prisoners.

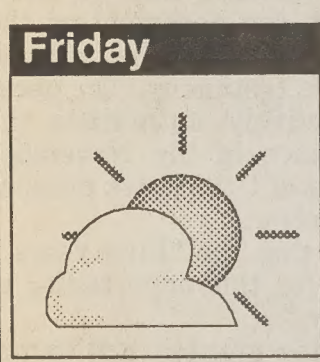

"The Revolutionary Justice Organization is sorry to freeze the hope of an imminent release of a few hostages until the picture becomes clearer about the Israeli position and the United Nations movement," said a communique from the group.

The 32-line statement dashed hopes raised this week that Jack Mann, a 77-year-old former World War II pilot from Britain, was about to go free.

Also Thursday, Shiite Muslim leaders seeking a hostages-for-prisoners swap said two German captives may be excluded from the proposed deal, in an attempt to bargain for the release of Lebanese terrorists who are jailed in Germany.

The Shiites, who spoke on condition of anonymity, also said two of the 11 Western hostages — an Italian and Briton — had died in captivity.

Renters aren't going to take i

Provo tenants irate about landlords, evictions, conditions

By BRENT L. FOSTER
Universe Staff Writer

Renters in Provo, irate with landlords, lack of privacy, uninhabitable apartments and eviction notices, formed a committee Thursday to fight for the rights of renters.

A Provo renter named Lisa said, "My friend was taking a shower when her landlord walked right into her bathroom as she stood there in her towel."

The participants in the meeting declined to give their last names for fear of retaliation or being evicted.

Renters agreed that the lack of privacy is a major concern they would like to see addressed in the upcoming election. Many renters told stories of landlords barging in unannounced.

Sandy, a BYU student, spoke of an apartment she lived in wrought with problems. "The basement bedroom flooded, and I slept on the floor for six weeks. The stove broke and was not repaired for weeks, and the furnace even caught on fire," she said.

"Renters have to walk on eggshells," said Jim, a Provo renter. "I was evicted after four years of renting. Friends who went to apply for my available apartment said they heard varying reports from the agency on the actual reason for eviction."

Jim felt he was evicted because he complained about necessary repairs.

Several renters in attendance were facing eviction notices and had no luck in finding available apartments.

"My landlord told me if I did not like the condition of my apartment to just leave, because he could find ten people who would like to rent it," Jim said.

Renters felt the high demand for apartments and lack of facilities caused many landlords to beat about and evict and raise rent prices because the market was so tight.

Joe, a BYU student, said, "While I was a student, living off-campus I felt like BYU was protecting me when problems would arise with landlords. Now that I am married and living off-campus, they tell me that they can't help if there are problems."

The group of renters voted to call the day "Renters United," and a committee was organized to meet in the next few weeks to organize the movement in a main direction.

The meeting, held at the Saint Mary's Episcopal Church, was attended by more than 75 renters, many of whom were looking for voice in the community. The next meeting is scheduled to be held Sept. 25 at Saint Mary's Episcopal Church, 200 N. 50 West at 7 p.m. All interested parties are urged to attend, Sandy said.

Salem man arrested after rash of obscene c

By TAD R. WALCH
Universe Staff Writer

A Salem man was arrested Monday in connection with a year-old investigation of obscene phone calls that, police say, originated at the man's desk at WordPerfect.

Police throughout Utah County had received complaints about a female caller who described herself as having run away from home in Idaho and having been abducted by four men who had given her a ride.

She would then tell the victim that only one of the men were present, but was forcing her to dance nude for him.

She then would plead with the victim to speak to her captor, giving her the chance to try to escape out the back door.

The male would then come on the phone and use explicit sexual language.

About 15 complaints had been received by the University Police Department from campus residents regarding obscene calls fitting the description of those made by the suspect, said Bill Pray, public relations assistant for the department.

Provo Police Capt. Duane Fraser said the man was linked to the case after a woman who had seen media reports of the well-publicized case received such a call on Sept. 12, and recognized what was happening.

She sent her husband across the street to use a neighbor's phone to call the police.

Police dispatchers were able to trace the call with the help of US West Communications and AT&T to an area of WordPerfect in Orem.

Police and WordPerfect security personnel worked together to nail down the exact phone.

When the woman again received an obscene call from the suspect last Monday, the call was traced and taped.

Though none of the victims had ever suspected one person could have been both the male and female callers, police now believe the suspect was responsible for both voices.

The man, 38, was arrested and then released on his own recognizance.

An arraignment hearing is pending but had not been scheduled as of Thursday afternoon.

The man's name will not be released until his arraignment. WordPerfect dismissed the man on Tuesday for having committed a criminal act.

WordPerfect spokesman Jeff Acerson said the man worked in the customer support department.

"It was his job to be on the phone," Acerson said.

The man worked in a rather secluded cubicle, Acerson said.

Class B misdemeanor charges are expected to be filed against the man by Provo, Orem and University Police. A class B misdemeanor carries a maximum sentence of up to six months in jail and a $1,000 fine.

CAMPUS

Student walks by deserted booths in the ELWC West Court during Involvement Week.

BYUSA blamed for low club sign-ups

TRENTE E. POOR
Assistant Campus Editor

Club presidents blame BYUSA for the low number of new club member sign-ups during the current Involvement Week. BYUSA admits the event could have been better planned. Scott Rackham, president of the medical ascent club, said there is no traffic flow where the club booths are located. "We've been stuck back where where nobody goes," he said.

This year the booths are located in Garden Court and the West Patio of the ELWC instead of on the checker Board Quad, as in other years.

"People have to go out of their way to come here," said Stephanie Key, president of the BYU ski club.

BYU usually has the largest social club on campus, but this year it's been low.

The main goal of Involvement Week is to provide the opportunity for BYU organizations to involve volunteers and recruit club members, said Trey Dayes, administrative vice president of BYUSA.

Last year there were two separate weeks, one for clubs to recruit and one for involvement in BYUSA programs, said Kevin Sears, associate vice president in charge of clubs.

Both weeks were merged into one this year, Sears said. BYUSA merged to facilitate clubs. The clubs have expressed concern in other years because Involvement Week has always preceded Club Week. Clubs complained all the people with free time had already become involved in BYUSA programs highlighted during Involvement Week by the time Club Week came around.

Because of the quantity of booths resulting from the merge and a concern about possible rain, the traditional location had to be changed, Sears said.

Another problem Rackham complained of is in the name itself. "Involvement Week sounds like you're volunteering for a Relief Society project. It doesn't give the club feeling."

Sears said the name of the week was not carefully considered and BYUSA was more interested in making sure clubs and BYUSA recruited at the same time.

Dayes said the week was planned quickly because the merge idea was not considered early enough.

"It wasn't as well planned as it could have been, but it was important for us to have the activity at the beginning of the year because that's when students have the most free time to commit to their interests," Dayes said.

Dayes invited club presidents to come talk to him and give BYUSA suggestions on how the week could be run better. "BYUSA is committed to students and student organizations on campus and we want to do it well," Dayes said.

Library to sell 20,000 items from archives

KAREN S. HAMMON
Universe Staff Writer

More than 20,000 items will be sold by the HBL's archives.

Books, music scores and records have accumulated in the library's warehouse will be on sale for one day. From 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., book collectors can get their fill in the parking lot of the Old Albertson's building on the corner of Canyon Road and North.

Thousands of books have been donated by the community," said David Bybee, BYU's gifts librarian and director of The Great Book Sale. Many books are duplicates, and others don't fit into the collection profile of the library.

Bybee is holding the book sale to generate funds for spending on other books the library could better use.

Due to old IRS laws, the library has had to hold donations for two years before legally being able to dispose of them, Bybee said.

The laws over the past years have caused a back log, and this is the perfect opportunity to put the books to good use.

Bybee said the sale will be a Dutch auction, with prices dropping throughout the day. Books will start selling at $3, and drop 50 percent in price each hour. During the last hour of the sale, 3 p.m. to 4 p.m., books will be free, Bybee said.

Bybee said Beatles records and National Geographic are just some of the items that will be sold. Both new and old books, magazines, music scores, records and pamphlets of all varieties will be available.

"There are even nice, old books in German and French from the 1700s and 1800s," Bybee said. "Book collectors have something to look forward to."

Celia Greenan, a senior from Danville, Calif., majoring in public relations said, "When I heard about the book sale, I couldn't believe it. I love to read books. I have a collection of paperback books, but have never been compelled to buy hardbacks because they are so expensive. This will be a perfect opportunity for me to start a collection."

"The final remainder of the books will go to BYU recycling," Bybee said.

The library staff will supervise the sale, but volunteers would be appreciated. "We are having a hard time staffing the early morning," Bybee said.

Chief urges progress of tribe

Mankiller stands behind culture as key to 21st century

By MICHELE EDGLEY
Universe Staff Writer

Wilma Mankiller, principal chief of the Cherokee Nation, was once asked by a lecture escort where she got the name Mankiller. She answered that it was a nickname, and she'd earned it.

The name, which in Cherokee is the title 'general' is a family name. But she has still earned it.

In July 1987 Mankiller was elected principal chief in a democratic election, making history as the first woman chief of a major tribe.

Mankiller stands firm behind the belief that Native Americans "can indeed march into the 21st century on their own terms."

Mankiller said Native Americans must work to ensure tribal governments and the tribal community remain intact. Mankiller said even though Native Americans may be facing every social indicator of decline, these problems can be overcome if Native Americans remain united.

Recent sovereignty from the Bureau of Indian Affairs and new legislation offering a self-governance agreement by congress is giving tribes more power.

Mankiller said Native Americans must also keep the culture and languages alive. Culture is a strong sense of self and values that used to interact in the world.

An important part of this is having positive role models. Mankiller said she is a workaholic and encourages Native American girls to involve themselves in the issues of tribal leadership.

"By and large women see things in an interconnected view. Women contribute collaboration and teamwork," Mankiller said.

Reform includes trusting in the thinking of tribal leaders. There must be a belief in self, Mankiller said. "External experts say they know what we need and want, but they don't live with our problems. The answer lies within ourselves."

"The fundamental issue is we have to begin where we're at," she said. "If there are no buildings we need to build them, if there are no jobs we need to create them."

"We need the talent, and we desperately need our young people to come back and help us to make positive changes," Mankiller said.

"There needs to be an institutional change in academia to give an accurate view of history in this country," Mankiller said. "We need to cure the Columbus myth. There were already people and governments functioning when Columbus came here."

Mankiller is proud of the past of her people whom she describes as enormously tenacious. In the last 20 years there has been tremendous progress.

Alumni group sponsoring essay contest

By CHERI PADFIELD
Universe Staff Writer

BYU students who are good with the pen might find it will help their pocketbooks.

The Student Alumni Association is sponsoring a Founder's Day essay contest during homecoming. Winners will receive $200 for first-place, $150 for second-place and $100 for third-place.

Joelle Moen, chairperson of the contest, said the theme of the contest is "Lighting the Y."

"The contest is open to all full-time BYU students," Moen said.

Michael Middleton, Student Alumni Association president, said all entries should be taken to the BYU Alumni House Monday through Friday between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. The deadline is Sept. 27.

The essay must be double-space typed, between 500 and 1,500 words, and include a cover sheet with the student's name, address, telephone number and essay title. For more information, call 378-2164.

Chinese, Taiwanese officials to speak at Y lecture series

By MICHELE EDGLEY
Universe Staff Writer

BYU will make history this week by hosting two of the highest ranking officials of China. Mou-Shih Ding and Zhu Qizhen will be speaking to student audiences on campus.

The first lecture will be today at 3 p.m. in 1170 TMCB by Mou-Shih Ding, representative of the Coordination Council for North American Affairs Office (CCNAA) in the United States. He serves as representative for the Republic of China on Taiwan in China's unofficial relations with the United States.

Ding is the equivalent of an ambassador and will be visiting at the invitation of the David M. Kennedy Center for international studies, according to James Toronto, assistant director of the center.

Kuo-Hwa Yu, former prime minister premier of Taiwan and C.F. Kuo, one of the most influential industrialist leaders in Taiwan, will also be accompanying Ding, Hyre said. Kuo recently donated $100,000 to the Kennedy Center and will be recognized at the speech, Hyre said.

Mrs. Kuo-Hwa Yu, Metsung Yu, is an accomplished painter and will present Kennedy with a painting to be displayed in the David M. Kennedy Center, Hyre said.

The officials are in Salt Lake City attending the United States

Republic of China on Taiwan joint economic council. The council is being chaired by Mr. Koo from Taiwan and former Secretary of Defense, Casper Weinberger, Hyre said.

The second lecture will be Monday at 2 p.m. in the Varsity Theater and will feature Ambassador Zhu Qizhen from the People's Republic of China. This is only the second time an ambassador from the PRC has visited BYU, Hyre said.

Qizhen's agenda will include meetings with The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saint's leaders. The meetings are "developing relations between the Church and the most populous nation on earth," Hyre said.

Qizhen served as Assistant Minister and Vice Minister in the Chinese Ministry of Foreign Affairs before being called as the U.S. Ambassador in October of 1989, the PRC embassy said.

His speech will be "China's Role in the Post Cold War Era."

BYU's Study Abroad office offers semesters abroad at Nanjing University. "It is an important exchange for BYU to go to Nanjing and learn Chinese," Hyre said.

BYU also has an exchange with Xian University.

Dr. Sechin Jagchid, professor of Asian Studies on campus said that the future of Taiwan and China "depend on positive development, except for that, they can't exist."

Harry H. Peer, professor of human development and comparative literature, has been named Professor of the Year by the USA and Key Club.

Peer received this award Wednesday at a luncheon in his honor.

Manbeian, university relations, and professors are nominated and interviewed by Key Club and are credited on several values which include scholarship, excellence in education, civic and campus service, involvement with students, faculty involvement in the community, and continual improvement in personal teaching and research.

At the luncheon, Ed Geary, assistant dean of humanities, said, "This person has been honored for his excellence in teaching, service and scholarship. He has not excelled in just one area, but in all three."

Peer received his bachelor's and master's degrees in Russian and German at BYU. He then earned his doctorate in comparative literature at the University of Maryland.

The BYU Jazz Legacy will be joining other bands competing at Utah's first jazz festival.

Dixie band jazzes it up

By SHANNON SPEARS
Universe Staff Writer

The BYU Jazz Legacy will be performing at Utah's first Jazz Festival in the Riverboat Convention Center in Salt Lake City Sept. 20 through 22.

Steve Call, originator of the band in 1983, said 13 jazz bands from all over the country will be there and BYU's is one of them. The other bands attending are professionals.

Bands attending the festival include St. Louis Ragtimers, celebrating its 30th anniversary; Denver's Queen City Jazz Band; and Chicago Six of California. Jazz legend Alvino Rey will also be showcased at the festival, Call said.

tival, Call said.

BYU's Jazz Legacy performs extensively throughout Utah and has performed at the Sacramento Dixieland Jazz Jubilee and the Lionel Hampton Jazz Festival, Call said.

The Dixieland band was invited to the upcoming Jazz Festival because it's "pretty well known," he said.

Call said the band was selected as one of three finalists in a national collegiate Dixieland competition in 1988.

BYU Jazz Legacy plays standard Dixieland renditions and it specializes in authentic re-creations of classic jazz recordings by "Jelly Roll" Morton, Louis Armstrong, Duke Ellington and others, Call said.

Lyle Durland, trombone player and member of the BYU Jazz Legacy for a year, said, "Dixieland's a lot of fun. It's very happy music and generally appreciated easily."

Dixieland is exciting music and all age groups like it, said David Egbert, bass player and member of the band for four years.

The band includes seven members: Tom Clark, saxophone and clarinet; Clark Burnside, clarinet; Chris Taylor, trumpet; Lyle Durland, trombone; Greg Stallings, piano; David Egbert, bass and Todd Bills, drums.

The festival opens today at 1 p.m. and tickets are available at the Riverboat.

Ballet West Washington bound after last Utah performance Sept. 21

By GAIL S. SINNOTT
Universe Staff Writer

You'll have to stay on your toes to catch Ballet West in Utah this semester.

The company is scheduled to leave for an engagement at the John F. Kennedy Center for Performing Arts in Washington D.C., and won't be back until Oct. 14.

There is, however, one more chance to see the company perform before it leaves. Ballet West is scheduled to perform Leo Tolstoy's "Anna Karenina" Sept. 13 through 21.

The story is that of an unhappily married woman who gives up her life as an aristocratic wife and mother to pursue a love affair with the dashing Count Vronsky. This decision to leave her family ultimately ends in tragedy.

The ballet was first choreographed in 1979 by Andre Prokovsky, said Theresa Solorio, a representative of Ballet West. The music was composed by Pyotr Ilyich Tchaikovsky and will be performed by the Utah Chamber Orchestra.

According to Dorothy Stowe, music and dance writer for the Deseret News, the company was one of six ballet companies nationwide invited to perform at the Kennedy Center.

All invitees were given grants by the National Endowment for the Arts on the condition that they created a ballet using American Artists, said Stowe. This was to promote creativity by American artists, she said.

Ballet West Executive Director Susan Barrell said the Washington, D.C., engagement marks an important achievement for Ballet West, and for the community.

This is the fourth time Ballet West has been invited to perform at the Kennedy Center, said Solorio.

Barrell said, "No other regional ballet company has received as many invitations to perform at this foremost national center for the performing arts."

Ballet West's entry in the festival is "The Age of Anxiety." The music is from Leonard Bernstein's Second Symphony which is subtitled "The Age of Anxiety" and is loosely based on a poem of the same name by W.H. Auden, Solorio said.

The piece was choreographed by American choreographer John Neumier and features the set and costume designs of Zack Brown, said Solorio.

According to Solorio, the piece is the story of four strangers who seek to find inner security through companionship, but eventually accept the inevitability of loneliness and go their separate ways.

The company will also be performing "The Gilded Bat" and "Divertimento No. 15" while in Washington D.C., said Solorio. These three pieces were showcased for Utah audiences Sept. 4 through the 8 at Ballet West's "Bon Voyage Festival".

"Anna Karenina" is a continuation of the festival.

"The Gilded Bat" was first formed in Utah in October 1981 like most ballet scores, this one commissioned by the company for the ballet, said Solorio.

Usually, she said, the music is ready written and the ballet company has to create its piece around score.

"Divertimento No. 15" is George Balanchine's earlier and is set to Mozart's "Divertimento No. 15 in B Flat," Solorio said.

After the company returns to Utah in October, said Barrell, it will rehearse for "The Nutcracker" which opens Dec. 12.

Race entry deadline sprinting up

By KARIANNE HENNI
Universe Staff Writer

The 15th annual St. George Marathon will take place Oct. 5. More than 2,000 runners from 32 states and 5 countries come together for the 18th largest marathon in the nation.

Carlene Baron, administrative assistant for the event, said, "The race is open to all types of runners, but mainly there are people who just want to run for fun."

For some though, the race is more serious, since it counts as a qualifier for both the Olympic trials and the Boston Marathon.

The run is a point-to-point race starting at 6:45 a.m. at Central Junction and finishing in the Wernon Worthen Park. Baron said it is a downhill, all-paved course.

Jill Parker, finish line coordinator, said there are 94 runners entered in the marathon from the Provo area so far.

One of them, Natalie Angle, a sophomore from Rialto, Calif., said this is her first marathon.

Angle decided to enter the race in March and has been preparing for it since. She said, "I have been training pretty hard since two weeks before school started."

She wanted to run because, "It is a challenge to see if I can do it. If I can do this I can do anything."

Angle is training with Donna Coyne, a junior majoring in athletic training from Pittsburgh, Pa.,

Like Angle, Coyne entered to see if she could do it, and believes it must "feel good to cross the finish line."

Mark Phillips, a former BYU student now attending UVCC, from McMinnville, Ore., will run his third marathon in St. George.

His goal is to qualify for the Boston Marathon in April. To do that he hopes to break three hours. "I feel my pace is where it should be," he said.

Phillips said anyone wanting to run a marathon needs to start training for it a long time in advance. "I've been training for the St. George Marathon for four months," he said.

Baron said there is a $15 fee to enter, which includes a T-shirt, a poster, a finish medallion and post-race refreshments. Deadline to enter the marathon is September 26.

Battle of Beasts' this Saturday
Cougars travel east looking for first win of season

By David L. Hancock
Sports Editor

Two consecutive losses on the West Coast, the Utah football team heads east to try to turn its season around against the No. 12-ranked Penn State Nittany Lion football team in front of a national television audience Saturday.

Although the two coaches, who are among the nation's winning active coaches in the NCAA, and their programs respect each other, this game is a battle of two teams that are licking their wounds from previous losses, a situation that has both coaches concerned.

The worst scenario for us was created by USC passing Penn State like they did, then for us to go back there and play them," said BYU coach LaVell Edwards. "There's no question I'll run into a real buzzsaw back there."

Edwards was referring to the 10-21 upset the No. 5-ranked Nittany Lions suffered at the hands of the Trojans a week ago. The loss broke the 11-game regular season winning streak and dropped the team to No. 5 ranking after a 34-22 loss to USC. The game win over defending national champion Georgia Tech, followed by an 81-0 trampling of Cincinnati.

On the other side of the ball will be an 0-2 Cougar team that lost a close game to UCLA 23-27, a game the Cougars feel they could have won. "It was frustrating because we could have won," Edwards said. "At some point this season we are going to be a pretty good team."

Facing a team that is 0-2 might make some coaches relax with confidence. Not Penn State head coach Joe Paterno. An 0-2 BYU team is just as much a concern for the veteran coach as facing an unbeaten team.

"BYU is always a good football team and well-coached team that's not used to being 0-2," said Paterno. "They are going to come here to show people that they have a good football team."

The only other time the two teams met was a 1989 Holiday Bowl thriller that Penn State won 50-39. BYU and Cougar quarterback Ty Detmer earned the praise of Paterno and the Nittany Lions during that game while throwing for a bowl game record 576 yards.

"I'd not had the chance to play a game against LaVell until the Holiday Bowl, and after getting an up-close look at the Cougars' passing game, I get insomnia thinking about Saturday night," Paterno said. "We're going to order up a windy day, let the grass grow and maybe send out for some rain showers."

If the weather doesn't bring the rain showers, they still may come — in the form of the Nittany Lion defense. Leading the storm will be Darren Perry who plays safety, or hero, as the position is called around Penn State, and the other safety Leonard Humphries.

Last season Perry had seven interceptions — one returned for a touchdown, and Humphries had six interceptions to lead a Penn defense that recorded 24 interceptions on the year — 23 of those coming in the final eight games of the season.

The Cougars' own defense will have to contend with a very relentless running attack if they expect to win, said Edwards. "I don't think Joe is a very happy camper with throwing the ball 40 times," Edwards said. "Knowing his mind-set, it wouldn't surprise me if they came out and just pounded at us and then went to the play-action from there."

The game will be televised nationally by ABC beginning at 6 p.m., local time.

Daly plays Hogan tour

By Thomas Peterson
Universe Sports Writer

Provo's Riverside Country Club is host for the Second Annual Ben Hogan Utah Classic sponsored by Geneva Steel. The tournament began Monday and runs through Sunday.

One of the prominent faces at this week's tournament is John Daly, winner of the 1991 PGA Championship at Indiana's Crooked Stick Golf Club and winner of the 1990 Ben Hogan Utah Classic.

The Ben Hogan Tour is named after the golf legend, Ben Hogan, winner of 69 professional tournaments and chairman of the board of the Ben Hogan Company. The tour began in February 1990 in California.

The tournament allows young golfers to practice their skills in a professional tournament environment.

The Ben Hogan Tournament players are called "the next generation of champions," by PGA Tour Commissioner Steve Beaman in an article in the Daily Herald Wednesday.

Several players have received their PGA qualifying cards from their placing in the Ben Hogan Tour tournaments.

Jeff Maggert, Dick Mast, Mike Springer, Jim McGovern, and Ed Humenik all received their PGA qualifier cards from their finishes in last year's Ben Hogan Tour.

Tickets for the tournament are available at the gate at Riverside Country Club, 2701 N. University Ave, in Provo for $10.

Atlanta-LA II this weekend

Associated Press

SAN ANGELES — The Atlanta Braves and Los Angeles Dodgers again with first place at stake in the NL West.

Without question, it's a big weekend for the Dodgers manager Tom Lauderbach. "But the only thing I'm going to decide is who's in the lineup at the end of the week," he said.

The Dodgers held a half-game lead over the Braves going Thursday's games. After losing last weekend's three-game series at Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium, the Braves led by a one-game margin and extended it to 1 1/2 games by winning two of three.

The Dodgers needed just two days to regain first place by beating the Cincinnati Reds twice at Dodger Stadium, while the Braves lost twice in San Francisco.

The Braves found out several things before Monday night's 8-5 loss to the Giants that they would be able to do. "We're going to be a team," said Otis Nixon for the rest of the season. "The lead-off hitter tested positive for cocaine and was suspended for 60 days."

The Braves were a little disappointed in their performance in San Francisco, said Lonnie Smith, Nixon's manager. "I don't think the attitude and dedication of this club has changed."

Winning two of three won't be easy for the Braves because the Dodgers have baseball's best home record.

"In a very California way, it's going to be an exciting time," Dodgers reliever Jim Gott said. "These people in LA are very used to winning. We've had great crowds all year long. I think you're going to see the volume turned up this weekend."

The Dodgers pitching rotation for this weekend has been up in the air because of Tim Lincecum's pulled right groin muscle and Ramon Martinez's sore right bicep.

Belcher pitched from a stretch in his start last Saturday in an 11-inning 2-1 loss, while Martinez was hammered Sunday in a 9-1 loss.

The Dodgers entered Thursday's game with 15 wins in their last 20 games and a 47-24 home record.

Darryl Strawberry, Eddie Murray and Kal Daniels have combined for 10 homers and 53 RBIs this month.

"There won't be any tomahawks this weekend," Strawberry said with a smile.

"I'll be ready to play; I don't look at this weekend as pressure. I've been there before. I just look at it as an opportunity to have fun and do your best."

BYU women spikers to host challenge

By Celeste J. Fitzhugh
Universe Sports Writer

After last weekend's successful home openers, the No. 9-ranked BYU women's volleyball team is home again this weekend hosting three ranked opponents: No. 5-ranked University of Nebraska, No. 11-ranked University of New Mexico and 20th-ranked University of Washington in the Mizuno Challenge at the Smith Fieldhouse.

The tournament is a modified round-robin, with conference foes BYU and New Mexico challenging opponents from the PAC 10 and Big 8 conferences.

Cougar head coach Elaine Michaelis said, "These are four quality teams. People will see some great volleyball. Nebraska has to be the favorite, but I think both us and New Mexico will have good matches against them."

BYU is hitting .220 as a team and is led by junior outside hitter Shannan Egbert averaging 3.22 kills per game.

Freshman setter Charlene Johnson has the best hitting percentage (.320) and is averaging 9.69 assists per game. Sophomore Tumua Matu'u leads the team in digs averaging 3.25 per game.

The Cougars will be without the aid of blocker Carol Shumann who suffered a knee injury two weeks ago. Cougar senior All-American Tea Nieminen also remains sidelined following a preseason knee injury.

Nebraska senior All-American Janet Kruse will be back for this tournament after sitting out with a sprained ankle.

"I feel that Nebraska is a final four caliber team," Michaelis said. "They've been playing without Janet Kruse. They'll be even better with her back in the lineup."

Friday the 8-1 Cougars play 7-1 Nebraska at 7:30 p.m. The match is preceded by New Mexico (3-2) going against Washington (8-1) at 5:30. On Saturday, BYU takes on Washington at 2 p.m. while New Mexico challenges Nebraska at 4 p.m.

SPORTS NOTES

BYU's rugby team travels to Salt Lake to open their season against the Skyline Rugby Club on Saturday. The game begins at 11 a.m. Saturday at Wasatch Junior High, located at 3750 S. 3100 East.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — The NCAA said Wednesday that it accepted the self-imposed penalties Tennessee announced in August, and placed the volunteer football program on probation for two years. The Vols thus avoided harsher punishment, such as a ban on television, and from bowl appearances.

NEW YORK — The NFL is expected to modify its rule barring celebrations following touchdowns, at least to do away with the 5-yard penalties for high-fives and tossing the ball into the stands.

Utah bison hunt scheduled and can't support one of last free-roaming bison herds

DAVID NIELSEN
Senior Staff Writer

The Utah Board of Big Game Conservation has authorized a conditional bison hunt to reduce the number of adult bison in southern Utah's Henry Mountains. The herd is one of the last free-roaming herds in North America.

The purpose of the hunt is two-fold, said Wes Shields, the big game manager of the Utah Division of Wildlife Resources.

Overgrazing in the area has been reduced due to five years of intensive hunting, and herds must be reduced to within range-carrying capacity, he said.

Current bison numbers exceed the set in an agreement between the Bureau of Land Management and ranchers who graze livestock on the Henry Mountains.

Don Butler, stake president of the BYU 16th Stake, went on a state-sponsored bison hunt in 1990.

Butler, an experienced big game hunter, said that like the Henry Mountain hunt, an interested hunter is only allowed to draw one permit in a lifetime.

Five permits are offered this year to hunt on Antelope Island, which is located in the middle of the Great Salt Lake.

Butler said, "I went and scouted the area before the hunt."

Butler bagged his buffalo on the first afternoon of the hunt.

Butler said the bison are as much of a challenge to hunt as any other big game animal because they have a well-developed sense of smell.

The other problem in hunting bison is their size.

It takes considerable effort to pack the animal to where it can be transported.

Hunters usually plan to shoot the bison in areas closest to access roads.

Twenty-two Henry Mountain permits will be issued to residents at $203 each, and two permits will be sold to non-residents for $1,003 each. A drawing to determine successful applicants will be Oct. 11.

The hunt is scheduled for Dec. 7 through 22.

The DWR and the Utah Wildlife Federation are trying to obtain additional rangeland for the Henry Mountain bison herd.

1 in 4 students ponder suicide, study says

Associated Press

ATLANTA — A new federal survey of high school students found that 27 percent "thought seriously" about killing themselves in the preceding year, and one in 12 said they actually tried.

The U.S. Centers for Disease Control survey also found that 2 percent said they sustained injuries serious enough to require medical attention after suicide attempts.

The survey of 11,631 students was conducted last year. Ninth through 12th grade students were questioned in every state, Washington, D.C., Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands, the CDC said Thursday.

Sixteen percent said they had made "a specific plan" and 8 percent said they had tried suicide at least once in the preceding year.

That's far greater than the number of actual suicides; the annual suicide rate for the age group is just 11 per 100,000, according to CDC statistics.

Dr. Patrick W. O'Carroll, a CDC suicide researcher, said that while it's "scary" that more than one in four seriously considered suicide, it's the 8 percent who tried that is particularly worrisome.

"You need to increasingly worry as you go down the spectrum," said O'Carroll, chief of the CDC's intentional injuries section, noting that almost everyone has had idle thoughts of suicide.

"Every one of us is at risk," he said.

"At some point, you have to not worry about that end of the spectrum that approaches the way everybody is. What's more worrisome is the attempted suicides, the medical consequences."

"That 8 percent could be a cry for help," said Robert R. Butterworth, a Los Angeles psychologist who specializes in youth psychology.

"A lot of times it's a desperate attempt to tell someone they're in pain ... but sometimes they mess up, and it can be fatal," he said.

"If somebody tells you they've attempted suicide, and you determine they're not at risk of dying, that doesn't mean you don't have to worry about helping that kid," O'Carroll said.

Yugoslav tanks roll to Croatia

EC studies possibility of sending peacekeeping forces

Associated Press

GREB, Yugoslavia — A huge number of Yugoslav army tanks, military vehicles and artillery rumbled toward Croatia on Thursday in a show of force that apparently meant to intimidate the secessionist republic's leaders.

The European Community, meanwhile, decided against dispatching a peacekeeping force to Yugoslavia. But the EC foreign ministers, meeting in the Netherlands, agreed to study the possibility of a deployment.

Croatia, scattered but violent bursts of fighting marred the cease-fire. The first violations of the cease-fire were reported Tuesday by the warring republics of Serbia and Croatia as well as the federal government — were reported minutes after the cease-fire deadline on Wednesday.

The continued fighting called into question just how much control the republics and military leaders have over their fighters.

Nearly 500 people have died, thousands have been wounded, and the republic's economy has been nearly paralyzed by battles that followed Croatia's June 25 declaration of independence. Among the latest victims were French journalist Pierre Observateur, who was killed Wednesday in Petrinja, 30 miles south of Zagreb. Patrick Riganti, a reporter of Switzerland's Radio Suisse Romande, was wounded, hospital officials in nearby Sisak said. Croatian TV said Blancher was killed by a mine.

The military convoy that rolled out of Belgrade Thursday was at least six miles long, made up of about 100 battle tanks — T-55s and M-84s — armored personnel carriers, and trucks towing 155mm howitzers.

Its destination was not known, but it was traveling on the main highway to Zagreb, the Croatian capital. When asked where they were going, one soldier sitting atop a Yugoslav-built M-84 tank replied: "We're not sure. Probably to beat the Croats."

Thousands of people turned out to cheer the convoy, tossing cigarettes and sandwiches to the soldiers. Some trucks in the convoy were apparently requisitioned from Serbian firms because they had license plates of central Serbian cities. The mobilization appeared to be an attempt to intimidate Croat fighters, who have blockaded federal garrisons in several key towns in the republic since Saturday.

At a Cabinet meeting Wednesday, federal Premier Ante Markovic demanded that Defense Minister Veljko Kadijevic resign, and assailed increasing army involvement in the fighting in Croatia, the Belgrade daily Borba reported.

"The army cannot be considered to be Yugoslav ... if it is involved in the civil war on the side of one of the warring parties," Markovic was quoted as saying. "It's impossible to explain, much less justify, the use of tanks, ships and helicopters in attacks on cities."

How to fit that one class into your schedule:

Figuring out a new semester schedule can be like putting together a puzzle — your classes don't always fit into place the way you want them to.

BYU Independent Study can help you piece together the class schedule you need.

Our program offers you:

- more than 300 college-level courses taught by BYU professors.
- university credit.
- registration at anytime.
- a full year to complete each course.
- the chance to work at your own pace, on your own time.

To register, you simply locate the class you need in the Independent Study course catalog, fill out the registration card, and bring it to our office, where you will be enrolled and given your course materials. It's that easy!

Nu Skin sued by former distributor

Californian charges firm with fraud, false advertising

By TODD TURNER
and Associated Press

A former Nu Skin International distributor in California has filed a federal lawsuit against the Provo-based personal-care products marketing company, alleging the firm is an illegal pyramid scheme.

Patricia Arata, a former Watsonville, Calif., distributor of Nu Skin products, claims she lost $4,000 to Nu Skin.

The suit, filed in U.S. District Court for San Francisco as a class-action complaint, calls Nu Skin "essentially a clone" of the now-defunct Cambridge Diet plan.

That plan was another multi-level marketing company in which some top Nu Skin distributors and a company executive were involved.

The suit charges that Nu Skin violated federal securities laws.

It also charges the company of fraud, false advertising and unfair business practices.

Arata's complaint estimates Nu Skin's more than 100,000 independent distributors lost more than $75 million to the marketing company.

"It (the lawsuit) is full of inaccuracies," said Nu Skin spokesman

"We can state unequivocally, however, that the complaint evidences a complete misunderstanding, if not a complete distortion, of the company and its marketing plan."

— Steven J. Lund,
Nu Skin executive vice president

Jason Chaffetz.

"One distributor claims she lost $4,000 and so they file a suit to sue Nu Skin for $75 million," Chaffetz said.

"It's as if they took another case and plugged the Nu Skin name in," Chaffetz said.

Steven J. Lund, Nu Skin executive vice president, said it's "absurd" and "ludicrous" for the complaint to say that 100,000 distributors are unhappy and that they were "bilked" out of $75 million.

Lund said, "We will have a more detailed response following a complete review of the complaint.

"We can state unequivocally, however, that the complaint evidences a complete misunderstanding, if not outright distortion, of the company and its marketing plan.

"Nu Skin genuinely regrets that this distributor is disappointed," he said.

"We are even sorrier that her problems with another distributor escaped the many procedures Nu Skin has set up to identify and resolve problems quickly and fairly," he said.

Nu Skin International, Inc. distributes its extensive line of personal care products through a network of more than 100,000 independent distributors in the United States, Canada and Hong Kong.

"Our distributors, of whom we are exceptionally proud, have the opportunity to retail a world-class product line and even build, train and manage their own sales organization.

"Through hard work they can achieve financial freedom in a business that is theirs alone. For some, this is a very attractive opportunity; for others, it is not," Lund said.

Guatemala earthquakes kill 19 people

Associated Press

GUATEMALA CITY — Two earthquakes sent houses made of adobe tumbling onto their occupants, killing at least 19 people and injuring dozens. U.S. helicopters were assisting in the rescue effort.

The double quakes in Guatemala on Wednesday also caused landslides that blocked the Pan American Highway.

The first, measuring 5.8 on the Richter scale, shook much of the country before dawn Wednesday and lasted about 10 seconds. A second quake, measuring 4 on the Richter scale, struck in the early evening.

The U.S. Geological Survey in Golden, Colo., said the initial quake was centered 25 miles southwest of Guatemala City.

Reports of severe damage and deaths came from Pochuta, about 80 miles southwest of the capital in the department of Chimaltenango.

At least 13 people died in Pochuta and more than 60 were injured, reported the Guatemalan National Emergency Commission.

Eddy Sanchez, a spokesman for the Guatemalan seismology institute, said many small villages around Pochuta were also badly damaged.

In a telephone interview, Emilia de los Santos, a resident of Pochuta, said about half the homes, made of adobe, were destroyed.

MILITARY

"The Army has neglected safety repairs and maintenance of historic structures at the fort. This negligence could be harmful to the health and safety of those who live and work at Fort Douglas," he said.

Garn's amendment requires the Army to do all necessary repairs within one year after the land transfer. The bill also told the Air Force to include funding in its 1993 budget for a new engineering complex at the Air National Guard Base in Salt Lake City.

Garn said the complex needs to be built because some of the guardsmen work "dangerously close" to where aircraft are parked.

"This situation is a safety hazard which must be corrected," Garn said.

The Senate bill also appropriated $4 million for the construction of a physical fitness training center at the Dugway Proving Ground in the desert west of Provo.

"We have an old fitness center that has been here for many years," said J. Williams, chief of the community recreation division at Dugway. Williams said the new center will include basketball and volleyball court, racquetball court, an administrative area and a running track.

"The new track will be moved from its current location in the winter," Williams said. The current center has suffered from scheduling usage in the winter because of its small size and the presence of people wishing to use it.

The center is used by about 500 people, including active-duty soldiers, reserve units in training and the civilian population of Dugway. Williams said the based on tentative plans to turn the old armory center over to its youth service center.

A Garn press release said appropriations bill also would provide $1 million for the continuing maintenance of an ammunition depot at Dugway.

Hill Air Force Base would receive a total of $6.7 million for production support facilities, weapons and release systems.

Humanity needs its mother, LDS author, poet tells Voice

By ALLISON M. HAWES
Universe Staff Writer

In order to heal the wounded children of a motherless house, the Heavenly Mother must be invited back into the human family, a prominent LDS author told members of Voice, BYU's club to promote the status of women, Thursday evening.

Carol Lynn Pearson, a BYU graduate and the author of novels, poetry and plays, told nearly 200 people at the club's first meeting of the semester that an era of the feminine and a new partnership between men and women is emerging.

"The human family is crying out for our mother and is inviting her to come home."

Pearson said she welcomed the chance to speak at BYU, because when she attended the university there was no movement or organization for people thinking and concerned about women's issues.

"I was looking around in a world that was colored masculine."

In her remarks, Pearson said her one-woman-play "Mother Wove the Morning," evolved from a desire to learn more about the Heavenly Mother. "My life has been guided by the hunger I have felt."

Stefani Gwilliam, 18, a freshman with an open major from Tempe, Ariz., said she came to the meeting because she had seen Pearson's play and thought it would be interesting to hear its author speak. "I was really touched by it; it gave me a lot to think about."

Pearson said the idea of a Heavenly Mother is not foreign to most members of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. "There is the knowledge in the back of our minds that there was a mother."

Amelia Rich, an 18-year-old freshman with an open major from Sandy, said, "I've always been fascinated with the idea that Heavenly Mother helps us just as Heavenly Father does."
